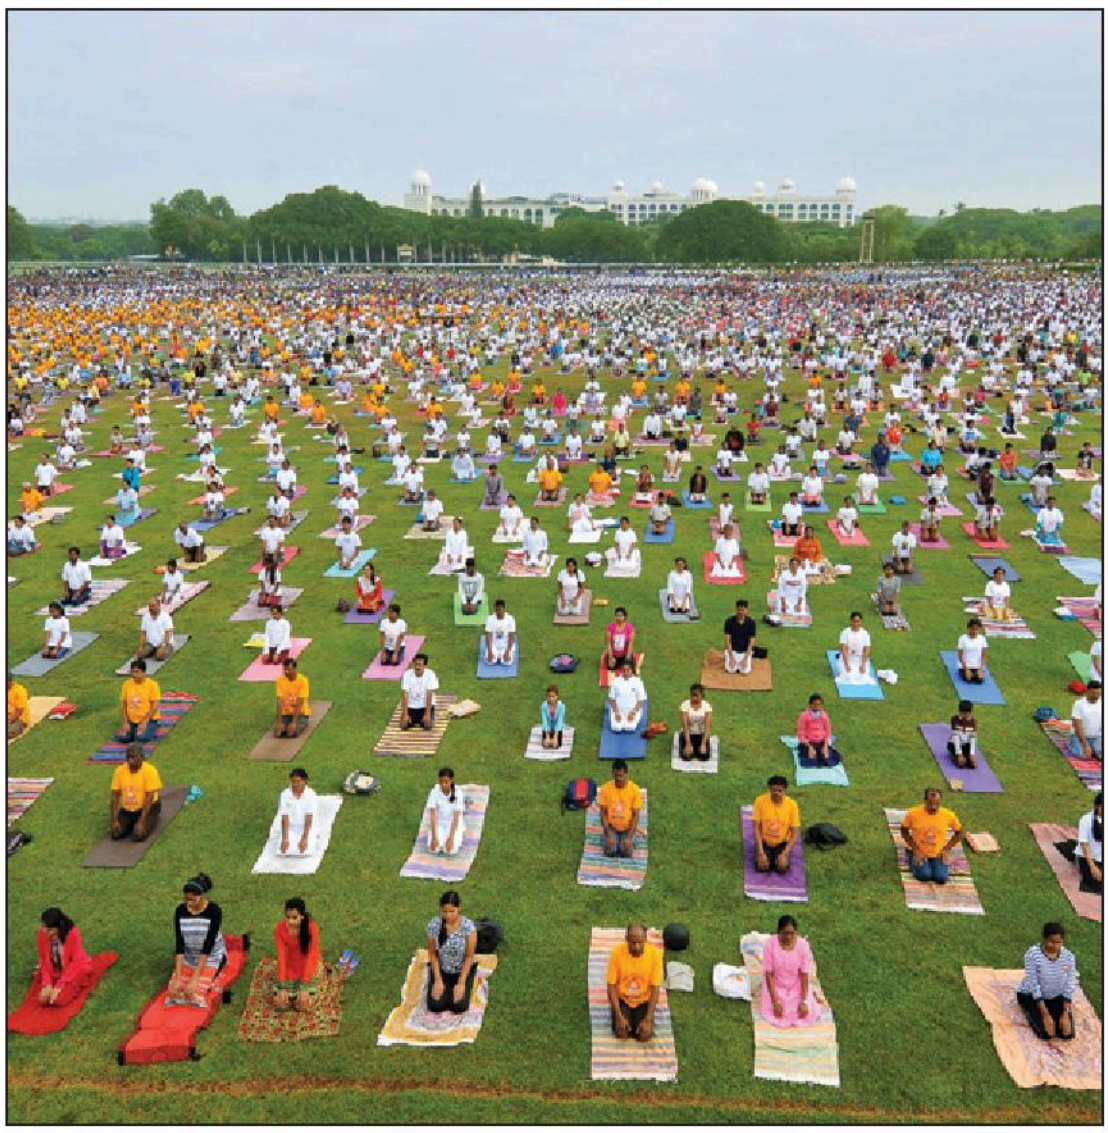
Over 25,000 rehearse for Guinness Yoga Record



Yoga enthusiasts perform at the second rehearsal at Mysore Race Course this morning.

Mysuru, June 18 (RK, PM & BCT)- The sprawling 139.30-acre Mysore Race Course land below the iconic Chamundi Hill played host to the second rehearsal this morning for the Guinness World Record attempt for 'yoga performance at a single venue' on the International Yoga Day on June 21.

Over 25,000 yoga enthusiasts from all over the city, cutting age and gender barriers, performed various asanas at the green environs that had the soothing cool air blowing from the Chamundi Hill. Of the 139.30 acres, over 71 acres were used for yoga performance today. The first rehearsal was held on June 11 in front of Kote Anjaneyaswamy Temple where over 2,500 people participated.

Buoyed by yesterday's crowd of over 9,000 people for the 'Chain Yoga' performance at the Mysore Palace premises, the District Administration had expected over 15,000 people for today's rehearsal. Authorities were clearly not disappointed when they saw over 25,000 people performing yoga. The organisers are now confident of roping in over 60,000 people on June 21. What adds to the confidence is that till Sunday (today) 12 pm, over 48,517 people had registered online. Plus on June 21, there will be thousands of people who will register on-the-spot at the counters set up at five gates of the Race Course.

The usually deserted streets of Race Course and surrounding areas in the mornings were teeming with people this morning. Yoga enthusiasts braved the mist and started assembling at the venue as early as 5.30 am. By 6.30 am, all participants had assembled at the venue. The yoga session began at 7.10 am with participants performing exercises on the mats that they had brought and the session ended at 8.05 am.

(See RECORD on page 8)

TRAFFIC JAMS

Areas surrounding the Race Course including Harishchandra Road, Suttur Mutt Road, Race Course Road, M.G. Road and roads leading to Sri Chamarajendra Zoological Gardens and Chamundi Hill were clogged from 6 am to 7 am when people arrived at the venue to perform yoga and from 8.15 am to 9.30 am as participants left the venue.

Some participants had parked vehicles along roadsides as there were no designated parking lots and the Traffic Police had a tough time in controlling the vehicles. Several residents in the area complained that they could not take their vehicles out of their compounds as other vehicles were parked in front of their houses.

Philosophy, literature inseparable: Bhyrappa

Eminent novelist speaks at Mysuru Literary Festival

Mysuru, June 18 (NNN)- Saraswathi Samman awardee Dr. S.L. Bhyrappa, a Kannada writer, in a brilliant exposition of philosophy, literature and writing novels, captured the attention of a packed hall at Senate Bhavan in the beautiful and sprawling Manasagangothri campus here.

He was delivering the inaugural address after declaring open the Mysuru Literary Fest organised by the Mysore Literary Association here this morning and said, "A literary person without a good foundation of philosophy is shallow and philosophy person without a content of literature is dry." The eminent Kannada writer, who has a large fan following, spoke in English at the Fest.

Dwelling at length on how he started his journey as a writer, he said: "I did my Ph.D under the guidance of Dr. Jawdekar who wanted me to pursue philosophy. But when I told him that my interest has changed and I am pursuing creative writing in Kannada, he was very upset. He said your interest has changed to a devil called literature. But, when I sent a copy of my novel 'Vamshavriksha,' he said your philosophy is not dead. You continue writing novels and then he presented me a new suit — a guide presenting instead of a student presenting!"

EDITOR'S BOTTOMLINE

A large part of the common understanding of Mughal history is dominated by what is best described as the "bad king Aurangzeb" theory of history. According to this theory, Aurangzeb, who was the Badshah from 1658 to 1707, is seen as a fanatical Muslim who through his bigoted policies brought about the downfall of the Mughal Empire. Even Jawaharlal Nehru was not free from portraying Aurangzeb in similar terms.

From the early 1960s, scholars like Nurul Hasan, Satish Chandra, Irfan Habib, Iqtidar Alam Khan, Athar Ali, Shireen Moosvi, Muzaffar Alam and Ruby Lal — to name the most important ones — have enriched the understanding of the Mughal economy and politics through their studies on the administrative system, the nobility, the various compulsions that the Emperors faced, their domestic space and of the agrarian system on which the entire imperial edifice rested. The popular understanding and imagination about the Mughal Empire persists in ignoring the findings of these outstanding scholars. —Rudrangshu Mukherjee in Business Standard.

Wanted nanny for haunted house!

Edinburgh: A family of four from Scotland is offering a £50,000, to a professional nanny willing to work in a haunted house and put up with supernatural occurrences that have so far driven away five other nannies in the last year alone.

According to the ad posted on a popular childcare job site, the "friendly family of four with 2 children ages 5 and 7 living in a village in the Scottish Borders" have been having trouble finding a stable nanny to look after their young ones. "We have lived in our home for nearly 10 years. We were told it was 'haunted' when we bought it," 5 nannies have left, each citing supernatural incidents. We haven't personally experienced any supernatural happenings, as they have been reported only while we've been out of the house, the ad reads.

If you're considering to apply after reading, you should know that the family is offering a salary of £50,000 gross per annum. You will also have your own room and private kitchen. Except for the whole supernatural part!

Living Painting

Paris: A 22-year-old, Kenza, a French makeup artist recently caused quite a lot of dropped jaws on Twitter with a set of photos of a "painting" whose protagonist turned out to be a living, breathing model.

Inspired by the work of Alexa Meade, an exceptionally talented artist whose mind-boggling masterpieces we featured a few years ago, the aspiring makeup artist painted a human model with broad brushstrokes to create the illusion that she was actually a character in a painting, and not a real live person.

Kenza, just completed a course in professional makeup and this amazing optical illusion was her final project. She hasn't revealed what her score was, but I think it's safe to say she passed. "It took me about two and a half hours to put makeup on the model, and a week's work in advance to prepare the scenery," Kenza said.

Generic Vs Branded Drugs: Some Solutions

Sir,

After having gone through various arguments for and against generic and branded drugs, I had to enter the field with my opinion in this regard. It has been made out through these letters that doctors would never like to prescribe generic drugs and they are making a living out of the mercy of pharmaceuticals which is absolutely not correct.

Let us see as why doctors would prefer to write branded drugs. Branded drugs are manufactured by pharmaceuticals which are well-known and as such these drugs are supposed to be of good quality, dependable with least impurities, and if something goes wrong, at least there is an address to complain.

Generic drugs, which do not have any particular name other than the ingredients, are manufactured by companies which are not known, whether the drugs manufactured by them have the ingredients mentioned in the packing is also doubtful. Whom to address if something happens?

This does not mean that all branded drugs are of good quality or that all generic drugs have no quality at all. But who has to decide? When a generic drug is prescribed, the chemist in the medical store will decide what to give depending on the margin of profit. If the patient does not have the expected results, whom to blame?

All doctors who prefer to write branded drugs are not greedy. There are any number of branded drugs, whose price are almost equal to generic drugs and are cost-effective. Of course, there are a few who write expensive drugs, because of so many reasons but the patient has the right to ask for an equivalent cheaper drug and if the doctor does not oblige, the patients have to change their doctor.

In US and other western countries, the generic drugs which are supplied mostly by the Indian companies have the same quality as the branded drugs available there. Who has ensured the quality in India? No doctor is averse to prescribe generic drugs if the government certifies about the quality. The health of the patient is his doctor's responsibility. How can he prescribe a drug whose quality is not known and put the patient's health in jeopardy?

The best way to solve this problem is to see that the generic drugs that are available have the same quality as the branded drugs for which government has to stand guarantee. Reduce the prices of the drugs and put a ceiling on the prices of branded drugs. The doctors should write only those brands which are cost-effective. Ultimately, the health of the patient should not suffer.

Teacher's death sparks protest; Relatives allege medical negligence

Mysuru, June 18 (YDS&BCT)- Relatives of a woman, who died three days after treatment at a private hospital, staged a protest in front of the hospital yesterday evening, accusing the doctors of negligence. They placed the woman's dead body in front of the hospital demanding action against the doctors.

Renuka

Twenty-eight-year-old Renuka, a resident of Yadavagiri was admitted to Chandrakala Hospital on Kalidasa Road for fever on June 15. She was working as a teacher at a private school at Kuvempunagar. She returned from the school on June 14 and had severe vomiting and high fever after she had dinner. She was rushed to the hospital on the morning of June 15.

Renuka since then was being treated at the hospital. But all of sudden the doctors in the hospital advised her family members to shift her to another hospital having better medical facility as her condition worsened due to dengue. According to Renuka's uncle Srinivas, on the day she was admitted to the hospital, her blood platelet count was 1,64,000. It rapidly reduced to 36,000 on June 17 (yesterday) but the doctors continued treating her till afternoon.

"Doctors told us later that Renuka had dengue and as the hospital did not have ventilator facility, she had to be shifted to another hospital," said Srinivas. Renuka, however, died on the way to Apollo Hospital where she was referred to. Later, her relatives brought back the body to Chandrakala Hospital and staged a protest.

Relatives alleged that the death was due to negligence of the doctors and if they had informed to shift Renuka to another hospital earlier, she would not have died. Relatives demanded that the hospital should pay compensation to the family members.

The protest caused traffic jams on the busy Kalidasa Road and surrounding areas and the Police had a tough time in controlling the protesters and traffic. ACP Umesh G. Shet said that a case has been registered against doctors at Jayalakshmipuram Police Station on charges of negligence after shifting her body to the mortuary.

SHOW-CAUSE NOTICE

Reacting to the reports that Renuka died of dengue, District Health Officer Dr. B. Basavaraju said that the hospital authorities had not sent the patient's blood samples to the district doctors who are authorised to declare it a dengue case.

"The hospital authorities should have sent the blood samples to us if it was a dengue case. We will send a show-cause notice to the hospital and we will also procure the blood samples of the woman and test them," he added.

She also heard a loud noise from the verandah, which scared her from coming out of the house. Later, when she woke up in the morning, she found the verandah lights shattered to pieces and 4-5 jack-fruits fallen from the tree in the premises.

In the past too, miscreants had vandalised her premises two times which has scared her family and as such, she is seeking Police protection, Smitha said in her complaint.

NO-CONFIDENCE MOTION AGAINST COUNCIL CHAIRMAN

Cong MLAs blame Ugrappa for fiasco; demand action

Bengaluru, June 18 - Upset over the embarrassment caused to the party after its no-confidence motion against Legislative Council Chairman D.H. Shankaramurthy was defeated on Thursday, some Congress leaders have demanded action against their party MLC V.S. Ugrappa and others.

MLAs S.T. Somashekar, K.N. Rajanna, D.G. Shanthana Gowda and others have complained to KPCC President Dr. G Parameshwara that the defeat of the motion and the behaviour of the MLCs concerned had caused severe embarrassment to the party.

Ugrappa, who is a close aide of Chief Minister Siddharamaiah, had rallied the support of the JD(S) and independent MLCs for unseating the Council Chairman through a No Confidence Motion.

Now, the Congress legislators are planning to meet All India Congress Committee General Secretary K.C. Venugopal, who is in-charge of party affairs in Karnataka, on this issue.

Ugrappa has been accused by other Congress MLAs and MLCs of moving the No Confidence Motion against Council Chairman Shankaramurthy, without holding consultations with the party President.

This has thereby caused immense trouble for the Government's Chief Whip at the Council, Ivan D'Souza, along with legislators, H.M. Revanna and Abdul Jabbar, who are allegedly facing the brunt of Ugrappa's actions.

"This behaviour has hurt the prospects of the Congress party in the coming Assembly elections and it has also increased the prospect of other parties entering into an alliance among themselves. We demand action against Ugrappa and others who are responsible for this and also demand that it be brought to the notice of the high command," the leaders urged.

Speaking to reporters, Parameshwara said that it would be discussed internally. "I will discuss it with the Chief Minister. Already Congress has suffered a setback. The leaders have expressed their unhappiness and we have to ensure such things do not happen in the future," he said.

Ugrappa said they had moved the motion only after the go-ahead given by the Chief Minister and Parameshwara. "This is not a loss to us, but showed how the BJP representative has degraded the post and the unholy alliance of the JD(S)," Ugrappa said.

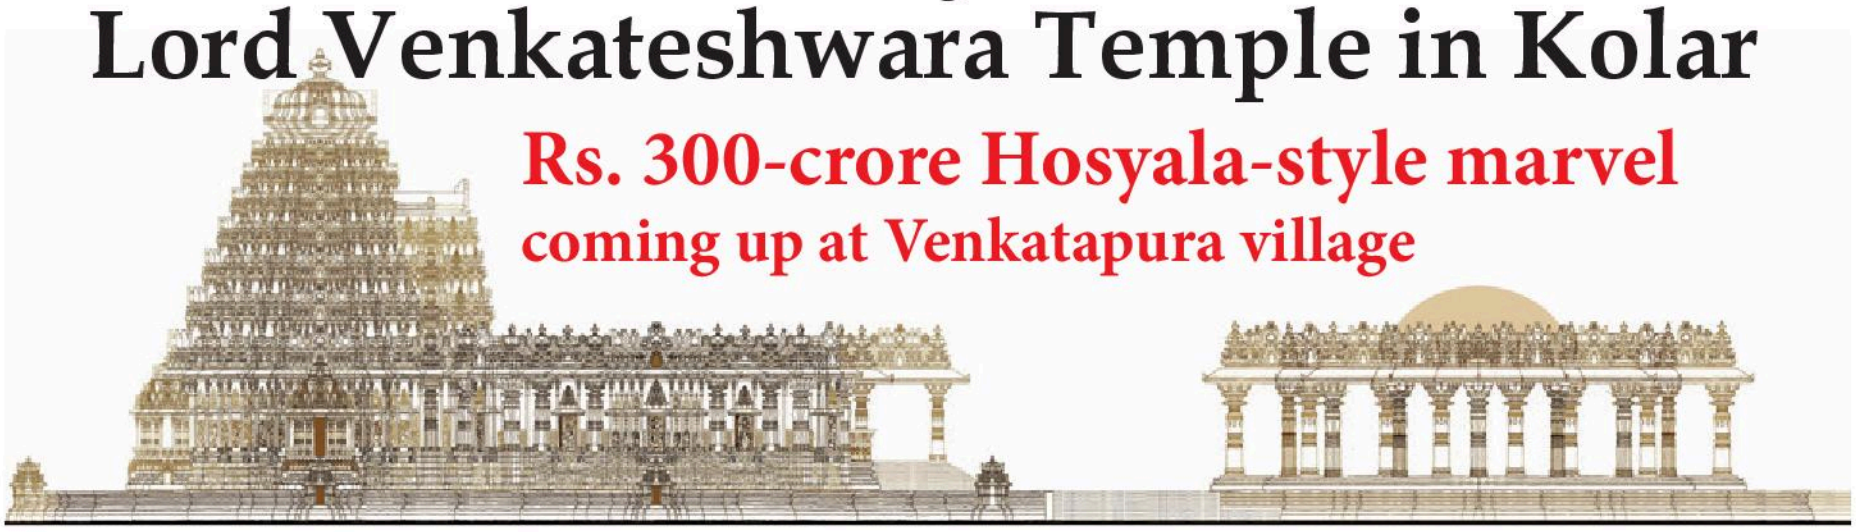
Yaduveer Wadiyar consecrates

Lord Venkateshwara Temple in Kolar



Rs. 300-crore Hosyala-style marvel coming up at Venkatapura village

By N. Niranjan Nikam

Venkatapura, a village in Nangli, Mulbagal Taluk of Kolar district, used to be a part of the Hoysala Kingdom. What is the connection between this small village and the Hoysalas? A very curious connection. In this village is coming up Lord Venkateshwara temple at a cost of Rs. 300 crore, styled on the lines of Hoysala architecture known for its innovative, ornate craftsmanship as well as the influences drawn from both North and South Indian temple architecture.

The scion of the Mysore royal family Yaduveer Krishnadatta Chamaraja Wadiyar consecrated the Upapitha (with the Gaja/elephant tala) on June 14. Who are the prime movers behind this massive temple project?

It is the Shree Kalyana Venkateshwara Hoysala Art Foundation; the President of the Foundation is Ramalinga Reddy. But it is his son Aravind Reddy (Secretary), B.Sc in Electronics but whose passion was painting, who is driving this dream.

Speaking to Star of Mysore over phone from Bengaluru, Aravind said, "It was my father's dream to build the Venkateshwara temple. He had retired from the Education department as an Assistant Director. I used to do Mysore-style traditional paintings. When you are painting, loneliness sets in. I wanted to do something different. Our family is involved in temple construction. One of my uncles built the Suryanarayana temple in Bengaluru. We are the third generation of people involved in building temples."

Why the Hoysala architecture? "Because that type of architecture stopped nearly 800 years ago. We wanted to bring it back to light. The Government has not taken any initiative. The thought came to me that we should do something. We started the construction of the temple in 2007-08 as a small project and our budget was between Rs. 15 lakh to Rs. 20 lakh," he said and added, "suddenly the whole Reddy community got together and slowly the project grew and we were ready for a Rs. 25 crore to Rs. 30 crore one."

It was at this time that Aravind met Yashaswini Sharma. "I was doing my M.Phil and researching on the Hoysala temple. It was very challenging and a lot of research and development, including the studying of Shastras were going on. A person, who was watching all this came to me and said, 'I have a friend who wants to build a small temple and he introduced me to Aravind," said Yashaswini, whose firm Esthique Architects is collaborating on the project, speaking to Star of Mysore.

It was Yashaswini who introduced Aravind to Adam Hardy, Professor of Asian Architecture at the Welsh School of Architecture, Cardiff University. "Adam's Ph.D was on Hoysala architecture. We met in Delhi in 2009. When I told him that we could spend Rs. 25 crore to Rs. 30 crore, he said why don't you really think big. There are the three famous temples in Belur, Halebid and Somanathpur. There are also 60 temples in Karnataka with Hoysala style of architecture. I can combine the uniqueness of each one of them and give you a beautiful design," said Aravind.

It was then that Aravind visited the Akshardham temple in Delhi and was inspired by it. "I decided then and there that we should also build something along those lines. There were two other temples that inspired me. One was the Golden Temple in Vellore, where a Swamiji younger than me had built it a cost of Rs. 600 crore and the other was the Kaalabhyreshwara temple in Adichunchanagiri," he said.

The Hoysala style takes years to work on because of its fine, minute, delicate detailing. It will take anywhere between 15 to 20 years to complete the dream project.

— Aravind Reddy, Secretary, Shree Kalyana Venkateshwara Hoysala Art Foundation

The site of the temple is on an elevated property which is a rocky plateau. The foundation work started in 2012. "Aravind was also profoundly influenced by the design of the Channakeshava temple at Belur. While these examples set a few requirements, the design of the temple remains an original one, continuing in the Hoysala tradition and will be built using granite and soapstone, employing traditional building techniques, and will be dedicated to the deity, Shree Kalyana Venkateshwara. Adam Hardy, keeping to the client's brief, "explored variations and permutations of stellate plan geometry among the most ingenious 'snowflake-like' Hoysala plans, and invented some new permutations," said Yashaswini.

The granite stones will be sourced from Karkala in Udupi district and the soapstone from the quarries in HD Kote, she said and added that some of the granite is also sourced from the site of the construction of the temple, near the rocky outcrop for the foundation.

Mysuru, June 18 (SBD&DM)- District in-Charge Minister Dr. H.C. Mahadevappa released Dakshina Kannada Zilla Panchayat CEO Dr. M.R. Ravi's works titled 'Jeevanotsaha' and 'Jeevana Mantapa' at a programme organised at Rani Bahadur auditorium in Manasagangothri here yesterday.

Dr. Ravi, who is from the city, is a columnist of SOM's sister concern Mysooru Mithra. A senior KAS Officer, he had earlier served as the Mysuru City Corporation (MCC) Commissioner and Additional Regional Commissioner in the city.

The two works are a collection of his articles that were published in Mysooru Mithra.

Speaking on he occasion, Dr. Mahadevappa said that Dr. Ravi has given a poetic touch to his thoughts in his works.

Observing that the books highlight the complex issues that the society is facing today, the Minister said that the works inspire the present generation for leading a cheerful life by overcoming social problems.

Noting that Dr. Ravi has a lot of faith in our democratic set up, Dr. Mahadevappa said that message of great personalities like Basavanna, Buddha, Dr. Ambedkar and St. Mother Teresa can be seen in the works.

Pointing out that Dr. Ravi is a multi-talented Government Officer, the Minister said that Dr. Ravi's articles always shed light on the problems faced by the people in their daily life, which shows his concerns for the welfare of the society.

Writer Prof. Maleyur Guruswamy, who spoke about the works, said that renowned writers such as Maasti Venkatesh Iyengar, M.S. Puttanna, Siddaiah Puranik and H.L. Nagegowda, who were bureaucrats, had contributed a lot for literature and Dr. Ravi had joined these great personalities in contributing to the field. Regretting the tendency to identify writers by their caste and creed, Guruswamy said that Dr. Ravi's works were thought-provoking.

Earlier, the author Dr. Ravi, who delivered the keynote address, said that writers should develop a thoughtful mind that can respond to the problems of the society. Noting that failure to respond to the societal problems is like deceiving oneself, he said that values play a key role in leading a happy life. Recalling the encouragement given to him by SOM and Mysooru Mithra Editor-in-Chief K.B. Ganapathy in becoming a writer, he said that he had shared his experiences and thoughts in his works.

Former Minister Prof. B.K. Chandrashekar, who presided, stressed on the need for legal provisions to enable Government bureaucrats to come up with their own ideas and suggestions. Pointing out that sharing of experiences by bureaucrats will help the society, he said that Dr. had good sense of freedom of expression. Attributing the social degradation to failure in the understanding of the Constitution, Prof. Chandrashekar emphasised on the need for the upliftment of backward classes beyond reservation.

SOM Editor-in-Chief K.B. Ganapathy, poetess Dr. Latha Rajashekar, Dr. Rajashekar, Publisher D.N. Lokappa, Youth Congress leaders Sunil Bose and others were present.

Bhyrappa, whose main interest is talking about death as he had buried his five-year-old younger brother at the age of 15 and lost his two elder brothers and mother to plague said, "The world of European philosophy and English writers talk about wonders whereas in Indian philosophy, they talk about death. The two great influences in my writings have been the Ramayana and the Mahabharata. Ramayana is poetry while Mahabharata is more concrete."

Recalling about his quest to understand death and how he met philosophy Professor Yamunacharya who gave him a book on 'Katopanishad' and asked him to study it, Bhyrappa said "I understood the story of Nachiketha but realised my limitations of understanding it. When I went back to Prof. Yamunacharya he asked me to study philosophy as a subject. Hence, I did my B.A and M.A. in philosophy and I developed an interest in aesthetics. I came in contact with Professor of Literature Bharath Singh who introduced me to Anand Coomerswamy's writings. I read almost all his books and my D.Litt was on aesthetics."

When he wrote Vamshavriksha, many 'navya' writers, who were influenced by writings of Shakespeare, Coleridge and Wordsworth, started criticising him. Even the Sunday supplement editors, who were influenced by this kind of writing and promoting 'navya' writers, were opposed to him. "I always feel that litterateurs must have a strong foundation in philosophy and only then they can be good writers."

He concluded his thought-provoking address by giving the example of Vyasa, who wrote the Mahabharata. "I do not know whether Vyasa dictated Mahabharata to Ganesha or he himself wrote it. Whether Mahabharata is a myth or true story but, I strongly feel Vyasa was a participant in Mahabharata. I feel Mahabharata is 'Itihasa' while Ramayana is 'kavya'. Vyasa wrote Mahabharata sitting in the Vyasaguha in Badrinath at a height of 10,000 ft," said Bhyrappa and added "if you go to that height you get a synoptic vision of everything that takes place in India. It is only then you get the height and depth of what is life and philosophy."

Earlier, writer Dr. H.S. Shivanna welcomed. President of Mysore Literary Association Prof. K.C. Belliappa spoke about the aims and objectives of the association. Secretary Reginald Wesley proposed the vote of thanks. Star of Mysore is the media partner for Mysuru Literary Fest.

Eminent historian Dr. Ramachandra Guha, novelist Shashi Deshpande, distinguished scholar and critic Prof. Harish Trivedi, well-known novelist Kavery Nambisan are speaking at the festival.

In the evening, there will be a panel discussion on "Role of Media Today," in which K.B. Ganapathy, Editor-in-Chief, Star of Mysore, writer from Kodagu C.P. Belliappa and Adman R.V. Rajan from Chennai will participate. The Fest will end with a grand violin concert by Mysore Nagaraj and Dr. Mysore Manjunath and party.

Alleged manhandling of driver by TC at City Bus Stand

Drivers, conductors stage protest

Mysuru, June 18 (RK&KS)- Alleging manhandling by an in-charge Traffic Controller (TC) on a driver, who was having breakfast at City Bus Stand, a few drivers and conductors staged a protest in the bus stand and refused to operate buses this morning.

Bus driver Kempegowda, attached to Sathagalli Bus Depot, was having breakfast on the platform when in-charge TC Srinivasamurthy, allegedly abused him stating that he was spoiling the platform and pushed the driver.

As the news spread, other drivers and conductors at the bus stand, stopped their operations and staged a protest demanding action against Srinivasamurthy, resulting in traffic jam at KR Circle and Sayyaji Rao Road. KSRTC Depot Manager Mathew, ACP (Traffic) K.N. Madaiah and Devaraja Traffic Inspector Santosh Kumar, rushed to the spot and managed to pacify the protestors. Buses began to ply after the Depot Manager assured the protestors of taking action.

Remembering Dewan C.V. Rangacharlu

Most people in Mysuru city have heard of the Town Hall opposite the Clock Tower but many do not know in whose memory this Hall was built. Just to test this I asked my grandson about it. He knew Town Hall but had not heard of Rangacharlu, the former Dewan of Mysore State.

Now let us try to know about this illustrious Dewan of yesteryears. Chettipunyam Veeravalli Rangacharlu was born in 1831 at Chettipunyam belonging to Chengalpattu. He had his early education at Pacchayappa School and Madras High School. He passed a proficiency examination and joined Madras Collector's Office in 1850 on a salary of rupees fourteen per month. His first appointment was that of Assistant Munshi (Clerk).

Then he was made the Record-Keeper to the Government and he did this job to the complete satisfaction of his superiors. One Assistant who was jealous of Rangacharlu misplaced an important record. After a day or two, he asked for that particular record. Rangacharlu said that the Assistant was in charge of the records and naturally he should be suspended and further action should be taken against him. That Assistant whose plan misfired fell at the feet of Rangacharlu and requested to be pardoned. The latter took a letter from him to this effect and warned him.

He further recorded that this should be shown in the personal file of the employee and this shows the administrative acumen and official procedure to which Rangacharlu gave importance. But he did not forget the humane side while taking important decisions in administration. His efficiency and hardworking nature attracted the officers and hence they gave him many more responsible positions such as Deputy Accountant, Head Writer and Translator.

He felt that a good administrator should have a sound knowledge of Law without which he will not be able to take firm decisions which cannot be questioned. Hence, Rangacharlu went to Madras and joined the Law College. He got a good glimpse into various aspects of civil and criminal law and appeared for the civil court pleader examination in 1856. He came out with flying colours and his teachers were greatly impressed not only by his knowledge of law but his interpretation to suit the contexts. He was appointed as the Tahasildar of Siadapet and it gave him a good opportunity to test his knowledge of Law in administration. Many officers and people felt that the orders passed by him cannot be surpassed or even revised. Subsequently he was appointed as the Naib Shirastedar of Nellore. In 1859 he was promoted as Deputy Collector of Rajamahendri.

The work that was being done by Rangacharlu attracted the attention of British Officer Taylor and the latter, studying the working of Railways, suggested ways and means to improve the Railways. In 1864 he was appointed as the Deputy Collector of Treasury at Calicut. Taylor was greatly impressed by the way Rangacharlu filled up the State Treasury by increasing the revenue collection. Rangacharlu himself went on tours and encouraged the officers to collect proper revenue.

In the meantime, Mummadi Krishnaraja Wadiyar passed away in 1868 and it was a big blow to Mysore Kingdom. This unexpected event put the British officers in serious difficulty. Major Elliot was appointed to take stock of the situation and solve it amicably. On the recommendation of Bowring, Rangacharlu was appointed to assist Elliot and the former did an admirable job. The Treasury was practically empty. Many precious articles and gold were stolen by the unethical officers. Rangacharlu stopped all the unnecessary expenditures. He also recommended to the British that Chamaraja Wadiyar, who was still a boy, should be coronated and it was accepted by the British. The Wadiyar's responsibility was given to Rangacharlu, including his education.

Rangacharlu took stock of fifty years' of British rule in Mysore and wrote a scholarly note on it, in which he wrote that the Mysore State has not developed as it ought to have been as progress and development have not taken place, though the British have done their part. In 1881, he was appointed Dewan of Mysore State and took up many developmental works such as the Railway line between Bangalore and Tiptur.

On 25th August 1881 he constituted the Prajapratinidhi Sabhe, an elected representation of the people in Mysore State and became famous for this institution.

Another contribution of Rangacharlu is the development of education of women. He gave many incentives for the education of women and used the State machinery towards this end. If there is good percentage of educated women in Mysore the major credit should go to Rangacharlu.

Rangacharlu appeared to be very strict in official matters, but he was kind in heart. Many private individuals have had the good fortune of his kindness and generosity. Thus he occupies an important position as Dewan of Mysore in the development of education, administration, economic, social and cultural life of Mysore State. The British government gave him the title CIE in 1878 for his contributions. He worked without any rest throughout his career and went to Madras for taking rest. But he passed away there on 20th January 1883.

In memory of his services to Mysore, the Town Hall here has been named as Rangacharlu Memorial Hall. That will remain as a fitting tribute to the great soul forever. Next time you go to the Town Hall, stand there in silence for a minute and pay your respect for this illustrious man who made Mysore great.

NOTE: However, it is a matter of regret that the MCC has not thought it proper to install a statue of Dewan Rangacharlu in Mysuru.

Asked how they plan to raise Rs. 300 crore, Aravind said, "We plan to go public. However, what we have already done is approached our own community people. We need 7,000 blocks of stones and each stone costs Rs 15,000. Already 1,000 of our members has donated for 1,000 stones. The remaining money will also be donated by them."

But what about collection from the public? "We have come up with a plan. We will go to every 330 villages in Kolar district. We will ask for a donation of Rs. 108. B.K.S. Verma, a well-known artist has painted the Srinivasa-Padmvathi Kalyana on the cards. We will present the card to each person who donates Rs. 108. We also plan to use social media for collecting donations," said Aravind.

A project of this size requires real good sculptors. Are there any Amara Shilpi Jakkanacharis? "Ashok Guidgar, a sculptor from Bidadi is part of the project. There are many others whom we are identifying all over the country. A few of the sculptures are still there in Puri, Jagannath, who follow the Gurukul system and the traditional methods. They are not after money. We have traced them," he said.

Each foundation stone is 3ft X 3ft X 9ft. The temple is set in a prakara of roughly 450 ft x 650 ft. The Aya calculations by Agama experts yielded an underlying square of the vimana walls of about 42 ft which in turn generated the geometry for the plan of the temple. The width of the garbha-griha excluding the bhadra projections stands at about 60 ft. The rangamantapa is also designed to be uniquely stellate. Together, the vimana and jagati measure about 109 ft, said Yashaswini.

"Shankar Stapati who sculpted Vikasa Soudha is the one leading the top-end team of sculptors. Master sculptors such as G.D. Bhat are also a part of the project. Dr Vishnu Bhattacharya, Agama advisor to Tirupati temple is also advising Aravind Reddy. Hardy, Yashaswini and myself had met the then Chief Minister Yeddyurappa and briefed him about the temple," said Arvind.

How long it will take for the temple to be completed? "The Hoysala style, as I told you takes years to work on because of its fine, minute, delicate detailing. It will take anywhere between 15 to 20 years to complete the dream project," he said.

Once the Venkateshwara temple is completed in Venkatapura, it will be one of the most arresting, eye-catching temples, bringing back the glorious Hoysala architecture in all its grandeur. There will be regular poojas performed at the temple, said Aravind.

"We were so happy that the Maharaja Yaduveer came and consecrated the temple," said Aravind and Yashaswini. Yaduveer's biological parents Swaroop Gopalaraj Urs and Leela Tripurasundari Devi were also present at the consecration.

Congress stages protest against

Union Government's anti-farmer policies

Mysuru, June 18 (PM&DM)- Accusing the NDA Government, led by Prime Minister Narendra Modi of following anti-farmer policies, members of Mysuru District Farmers Congress Committee staged a demonstration at Gandhi Square in city yesterday demanding waving off farm loans in public sector Banks.

Strongly condemning the police firing on protesting farmers at Madhya Pradesh recently, the protesters sought announcement of loan waiver by the Union Government, appropriate compensation to the families of the deceased MP farmers and a lasting solution to the agrarian crisis.

They also sought the intervention of the President for sacking the MP Govt., which had killed innocent farmers.

Committee President H.R. Suresh Kumar, Congress leaders K. Marigowda, M. Satyanarayan, Dr. Pushpa Amarnath, Deepak Raj and others led the protest.

Dalits stage protest

Nearly 70 Dalits, under the joint banner of Karnataka Rajya Dalit Sangharsh Samiti (Ambedkarite) and Karnataka Dalit Mahila Okkoota, staged a demonstration in front of the DC's office here yesterday, demanding shelter to the shelterless and appropriate rehabilitation to all those who were freed from bonded labour in the district.

Alleging that the District Administration was apathetic to their plight, the protesters urged the Government to fulfil their seven point charter of demands which included sanction of burial ground for the community in all villages, civic amenities to Dalit colonies, shelter to all shelterness Dalit families and suitable compensation to Pourakarmika Ganesh, who was allegedly forced to get into an overflowing manhole atop Chamundi Hill among others.

Dalit leaders Ningaraj Malladi, K. Nanjappa, Diwakar, Lakshmamma and others led the protest.

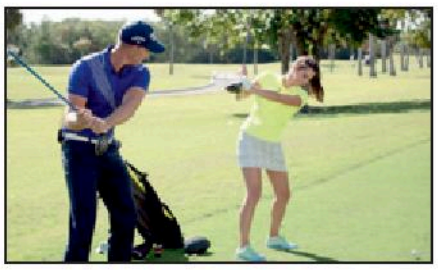
WORD OF THE DAY

Yips

Pronunciation: YIPS
Meaning: A state of nervous tension affecting an athlete (such as a golfer) in the performance of a crucial action.



Origin: Who first dubbed an athlete's stress under pressure "the yips"? We're not sure. We also can't say for certain if the plural noun yips has anything to do with yip, a word of imitative origin that functions both as a verb meaning "to bark sharply, quickly, and often continuously" and as a noun meaning "a short bark (as of a dog)." Some theories equate the "yip" sound made by a small dog with the unfortunate habit some athletes have of flinching or "hiccupping" when a steady hand is called for. What we do know for certain is that sportswriters have been using yips since the first half of the 20th century and that it most often appears in golf-related contexts.

THE ODD WORD

Onyxis

Ingrown nail

IDIOM OF THE DAY

The order of the boot

Meaning: Given the sack; that is, asked to leave your job (see 'get the sack').

Origin: A jokey version of 'kicked out' or 'booted out'. It also conjures up ironic images of real heraldic orders like the Order of the Garter.
The first record of 'given the boot' in print is in Sir H. Rider Haggard's Colonel Quaritch, 1888:
"Well, it's a good job anyway, and I thank God Almighty for it," said he, "and more especial since there'll be the money to take over the Moat Farm and give that varmint Janter the boot."
"Give him what?"
"Why, kick him out, sir, for good and all, begging your pardon, sir."
Slightly later is the first reference to 'the order of the boot', in Henry Taprell Dorling's (a.k.a. Taffrail) The Sub: "An habitual slacker... generally got the Order of the Boot at the end of his third term."
